

CPD Series:

Knowledge Management in Transport

Course Code: SC 26-012

15 May 2026 (Friday), 7:00 pm – 10:00 pm

Objectives and Learning Outcomes

Knowledge is one of the key success factors for both individuals and organizations, which can help them achieve continuous improvement and competitive advantages. Tacit knowledge (隱性知識) is something that “we can know more than we can tell” and practically named as “EXPERIENCE”. Experience of frontline staff is the most valuable resource for an organization to perform incredible service.

The course introduces practical Knowledge Management tools, allowing participants to apply them in their workplace, and enabling them to share and reuse tacit knowledge.

Upon completion of this course, participants will be able to:

- Understand knowledge management and its importance to an organization's performance;
- Apply different Knowledge Management tools in their workplace;
- Establish and promote Knowledge Management in their organization; and
- Tailor-make their own tools that are suitable for their workplace and organization.
